Poised on a hill overlooking the Bay of Naples, Grand Hotel Parker's is the city's first and oldest luxury hotel. The elegant public rooms are adorned with original antiques, and bronze sculptures gleam under chandeliers.

The hotel exudes an effortless and homely ambience. Guests are invited to enjoy the breathtaking full à la carte breakfast, the mouth-watering Mamma-style Neapolitan cuisine at the Muse Restaurant and the two Michelin-starred gastronomy at the George restaurant. Head to the rooftop bar for a chilled negroni and watch the moon rise on the Bay of Naples.

The backstory

At the end of the 19th century, George Parker Bidder III, a wealthy English marine biologist, saved the former Hotel Tramontano Beau Rivale, where he was a loyal guest, from financial ruin. The hotel was renamed Grand Hotel Parker's and became the preferred retreat for the literary and cultural elite of British high society. After World War II, the hotel was once again rescued, this time by Francesco Paolo Avallone, a patron of the fine arts.
